Maryland Public Television to premiere Real Stories of Addiction and Hope on September 22

Debuting during National Recovery Month, hour-long documentary focuses on individuals' struggles and recovery from addiction

OWINGS MILLS, MD – Maryland Public Television will premiere the documentary Real Stories of Addiction and Hope on Monday, September 22 at 9 p.m. on MPT and the MPT livestream. A preview can be found <https://bit.ly/3VcMTxz>.

Concurrent with its broadcast debut, MPT will also present a special one-hour livestream of the program on its YouTube channel. There, viewers will be able to watch the full program and engage in a live Q&A chat with Behavior Health System Baltimore Director of Special Projects Daniel Jarvis. With more than 25 years of providing services in the areas of substance abuse, homelessness, permanent housing, and criminal justice, Jarvis helps expose individuals to resources that provide them with skills and knowledge to take part in their recovery.

A co-production of Obie Productions and MPT, Real Stories of Addiction and Hope explores the lives of 11 individuals through their most difficult moments. In the grip of a continuing illness, drugs became more important than their own wellbeing or the welfare of their families. However, they survived and built new identities for themselves and freedom in everyday living. Through their experiences, they learned recovery would not have a finish line, but would be a lifelong process.

Among the individuals profiled are:

- Desiree, who was a teenager when she began using drugs to lessen the pain of her experiences.
- Joe, who was incarcerated as a young teen and used drugs to help him feel something he otherwise could not.
- LaTonya, who, before being introduced to crack cocaine, was abused as a child and was introduced to alcohol and smoking by her mom.
- Wayne, who came to believe that being in jail was the best way to stay sober and off heroin.

These individuals' powerful stories are supplemented by clinical insight into the reality of substance abuse, addiction, and recovery.

All 24 local jurisdictions in Maryland have reported opioid-related intoxication fatalities in the last year, and hospital emergency department visits for non-fatal, opioid-related overdoses continue to rise. A yearlong investigation published by The Baltimore Banner and The New York Times revealed an unprecedented overdose crisis gripping Baltimore, with thousands of deaths that exceed both motor vehicle accidents and firearms.

Major underwriting support for this program was provided by Michael Silberman and Family, and the film was produced in cooperation with Behavioral Health System Baltimore. Viewers can find more information at mpt.org/addiction/.
